

What is the Internet?

The Internet is a file server of file servers. The file servers are connected worldwide like a web.

How do we connect with the Internet?

First you need a computer and a phone so people can reach you. Then you need a modem so the computer can talk on the phone. Next you have to have an Internet Service Provider (ISP). They will give you a phone number that your computer can use to get on the Internet.

What are other names people have given the Internet?

Other names for the Internet are World Wide Web and the Information Highway.

What is a site on the Web?

A site on the Web is a place you can go on the Internet.

How many sites are there on the Web?

There are millions pages of information on the Internet. There are millions pages of new information added to the Internet every month.

What is a search engine?

It's a computer program on the Internet, which helps you find information on the World Wide Web such as Yahoologans. All you need to do is to type the subject you want to look for in the search engine.

What search engines should I use?

There are search engines for kids. One search engine is Yahoologans at <http://www.yahoologans.com>. This search engine has "sifted" Internet sites and will point you to only "appropriate sites"

Because I see it or read it on the Web, does that make it true?

Some sites have facts and some sites are opinions. A fact is something true. An opinion is something that you think. When you visit a site, ask yourself if this site is fact or opinion.

Where do I type the addresses I want to visit?

At the top of the screen there's a white, empty line where you type the right keys or it won't work. Use the right lowercase and uppercase letters or your address won't work.

What do I do if all of the pictures don't appear?

If a picture doesn't appear on your computer, click on the reload button at the top of the screen of the computer.

What should I do if it's taking too long to get my information?

You need to click stop and then click the reload button. Then you try it again.

How do I go back to a page that I've been to before?

You click the arrow in the left hand corner that points to the left. Then keep clicking the arrow until you get to the page that you've been to before.

If I find a site I like, how can I save it to see it again another time?

If you're using Netscape, click on bookmarks to see your list. If you're using Internet Explorer, click on favorites to see your list.

